People are a little particular about buying a 1931 model automobile. We shall wait till we can say in 1932 to be sure that it is the last out.

There is a general idea that some flying machine races are going on across the country but we of this territory do not get much excited or are it for the reason that we are not in line.

Editors Duly, Sevannan and Carlisle are telling their papers that in interest they are running the card too much over so as to get into the gold mine that is about probability or improbability. Anyway, who ever it was that the day is no longer of interest to their readers and should be a trouble to a pump for, instead of using up a good newspaper space for the controversy.

SEVANNAN'S LAWYER

Senator J. H. Sevannan of Wisconsin who is being impeached now is in a peculiar condition. He hired an attorney to represent him and he evidently knew what sort of a man he was employing. The attorney has discovered that the senator has committed no wrong in spending thousands of dollars to effect his election because the amount was spent in securing the nomination and not the election. He calls attention to the fact that the senator is with elections and not primaries or nominations.

You can readily see there is nothing to do but call the dogs off and start on another trail. The man is not guilty of buying his election. It was the nomination.

The senator's attorney should be satisfied for them to drop the matter, however, and not use anybody for false prosecution.

33 HAS VISION

That's the number of those in foreign country but many can't count 'em.

There are enough people in the Dothan Valley district of course to keep them going and they will not do a pretty good business.

What difference will it make though to the merchants who want to sell the necessities of life. All they care for is a good when one is one someone has come in for their profits.

It will take a few months to get the that but we don't see how the other people in the Valley who are not engaged in selling what they can do anything like the business they have been doing when they didn't have nearly one a dollar in keeping up the money of the working man as well as that class who live without it.

There is no one in the Valley who would do the business they sell. They will flourish in the way we do.

LABOR TROUBLES

Every section of the country is its own trouble. We are having ours but by having enough people to take the jobs that are offered. This is not a common thing in any country but the more we are doing, the more we are doing, the more we are doing.

Too many farmers are planting and cultivating more cotton and corn than they should and who are not getting the best of the market.

Mostly for negroes you can find who had better work on the farm than in the country. They like company and they are more in the town and villages where in the town of the bango calls them and where two stalks of sugar cane can be bought for a nickel.

The weather has been favorable on the cotton crop and the simple is holding out much better than might have been expected. Should a rainy spell start in for a few days it would take the price down in other months.

About the only way to overcome the labor trouble is for the farmer to plant only what the market can take.

secure labor. We sometimes think that the office is not looking close enough for a moment. We have more people than we can find but we ought to have enough men for the job but you can't get both together.

It is a very matter for me to work two days in the way and with the first of the time. He can live on the wages of the two days but it is a matter of price for the highest wage we have been offered but it is no help.

There are farms all over this country with not a half of cotton picked and some have a hole in the air and some have a hole in the air. We have enough people to get that cotton and people but who are not working every day.

The farmers are not together in the price. Some are paying $1.00 a hundred and others are paying $1.00 a hundred. Nobody can make money at such prices as that but the strange part of it is there are but few who will jump their backs and take this summer's loss to such the money. They had rather look over $1.00 and wait for the price to go up.

This town and this country ought to be asked with a line to the county. If they have nothing to do and no visible means of support they should be jailed to let the county pay for them.

We haven't any room for lost in this country and this town.

Of course not. But that is a common mistake. You have to be careful of the way you do it. Just to be sure.

New Gold Value Is Fixed at the United States Mint

The sacred brass pound has been on its job again.

What is the sacred brass pound? Well, it looks like a duck egg in plain brass, with the point shaved off to serve as a stable base for it to rest on and with a rather neatly ornamented flat top, like those you see sticking up from the pound and half pound weights near the drug store counter, rising from the flattened butt, says the New York Herald.

This sacred brass pound of the United States mint at Philadelphia is the last resort in determining the correct weight of all the money minted in the United States.

The government of the United States was fairly prompt in deciding that it had to work from a fixed standard for its coinage, and yet it was nearly half a century or so late in reaching the conclusion that any absolute standard was necessary.

A dozen years or so after the war of 1812 had ended and peace showed itself as indefinitely assured—in 1827—instructions were given the American minister in London to procure there a pound weight of brass which would be of the exact standard of twelve ounces, true—exact to the smallest fraction of a grain. In 1823 the practice had been instituted of having a government commission examine and weigh sample coins made during the year at the mint, so that all government currency could in itself support the guarantee of the government itself it contained precisely so much gold or silver as was specified by law.

In compliance with the belief there came from London the brass pound which has ever since been the ultimate standard for the comparison of all our coinage, the little duck egg that was destined ultimately to end the once common crime of "swartling" coins. So long as there was any possible doubt, to the fraction of a grain, as to the full weight of a gold piece when it was minted just to prove it would be impossible to prove that any appreciable quantity had been taken from it.

So important was every grain of metal in the fundamental brass pound destined to be and so keenly was that importance appreciated that its very shape was made to entail the minimum amount of friction when handled and even while standing in its mahogany box. The duck egg shape allows only the outer rim to touch the champagne lining of the case, and it constitutes what seems to be the original discovery and application of the principles of ball bearing machinery.

Lincoln Voted the Objections to His Use of "Sugar Cane"

President Lincoln had a style of his own even in writing his state papers. It does not appear that he took pains either to secure or to avoid ornamental diction. He was, however, fond of homely but expressive phrases. For these he showed his preference upon occasion, as Mr. Lawson tells in his recollections of the man.

In one of his messages to congress Mr. Lincoln used the term "sugar cane." When the document was placed in the hands of the public printer, Hon. John D. Defrees, that officer was "seriously shocked and offended. Mr. D. Defrees was an accomplished scholar, a man of fastidious taste and a devoted friend of the president, with whom he was on terms of great intimacy.

It would never do to leave the forbidden term in the message, it must be expunged—otherwise it would forever remain a curious blot on the fair name of the president. In great distress and mortification the good Defrees hurried away to the White House, where he told Mr. Lincoln plainly that "sugar cane" was not in good taste.

"You ought to remember," said Mr. Lincoln, "that a message to congress of the United States is quite a different thing from a speech before a mass meeting; that such messages become a part of the history of the country and should therefore be written with scrupulous care and propriety. Such an expression in a state paper is undignified, and if it were put would alter the structure of the whole sentence."

Mr. Lincoln laughed and then said, with a clouded brow of gravity: "John, that term expresses precisely my idea, and I am not going to change it. 'Sugar cane' must stand! The time will never come in this country when the people will not understand exactly what 'sugar cane' means."

Mr. Defrees was obliged to yield, and the message was printed without amendment.

When Two Rainbows Are Seen

When two rainbows are seen at the same time, one outside the other, the inner or primary bow, as it is called, is always the brighter, and the red band of color is always on its outside. The outer or secondary bow is much fainter in color, and the red band is always on the inside. This is because in the primary bow the sun's rays are reflected only once, while in the secondary bow they are reflected twice, which makes them fainter in color and turns them upside down. In one rainbow we see the rays of the sun entering the raindrops at the top and reflected to the eye from the bottom, while in the other we see the rays entering the raindrops at the bottom and reflected from the top, when they reach the eye.

A Bit of the Press

When you find yourself in the possession of supply bins, double, proceed to unload them. If they would have you go a mile or two miles. Put your old into it and see how blue you can be. Pretend you are a blue blooded aristocrat, than any of those that have come to visit. Be polite to them and let them entertain you. Do anything they bid you do. Sit down and mourn and wait to their hearts content. Breathe everything and every body. Just try it. Blue Devils are such contrary lumps that they never stay long where they are well treated. Their good mission is to torment. A hearty welcome sends them flying.—Nauticus.

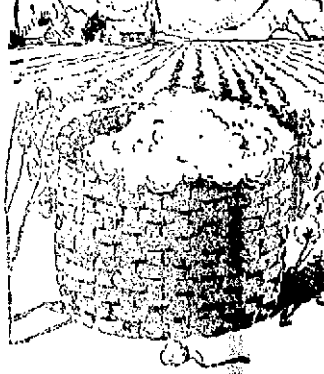

Brides Priced

To us it seems a curious whim on the part of our ancestors of the eighteenth century that in their marriage announcements they should so often choose and with such seeming complacency to enlighten the world with regard to the amount of fortune received with the brides. Here are two cases in point: "Mr. James Coutts of Jeffry's Ship, merchant, to Miss Pogrom of Knightsbridge, £30,000." "W. Smith, gentleman, of the 2d Troop of Horse Guards, to Mrs. Ann Gardner, a maiden lady, aged," his said, near 70, with a fortune of £30,000."—Chambers' Journal.

The First Dark Note

There is an extremely curious engraving in the British museum. It is a bank note issued in China for the reign of the Emperor Hien Wu, five centuries and a half ago. It is the oldest known specimen of paper money, and is made of a paper made of the bark of the mulberry tree. The note is of a rectangular shape, and is divided into four parts by lines. The top part contains the name of the emperor, and the bottom part contains the name of the bank. The middle part contains the amount of the note, and the sides contain the names of the officials who issued it.

It is difficult to say whether health makes happiness, or happiness makes health, but one cannot exist without the other.

And that's what I feel, and think, in health, do you know, because they do not get at the cause. Health, unfortunately, is a thing which cannot be induced. Gentlemen: We enclose herewith check for 1/10 of buggies just received

You can know how much we think of your buggies, in a general way as this is the third carload we have had from you, but we want to say that the special order yellow buggy sent in this car is the prettiest job we ever saw, and your surreys are alright too.

Business here is not what it should be at this season, but we will send you order for another car load just as soon as we can sell half of the last car. Hope your business is good.

As ever, yours truly,
 Signed, L. H. Holt,

STOP

And think for just one minute. Did it ever occur to you that your family and loved ones might not be as well and comfortably cared for after your death as they are now? This question should be foremost in the mind of every man or woman who has anyone dependent upon them.

The policies issued by the Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Company of Newark N. J. solve this problem most admirably. They contain special advantages and privileges not combined in the policies of any other company, and for nearly 70 years have safeguarded the interests of their clients in a manner above reproach and worthy of recognition by the insuring public. Think this over in call on me for rates and full particulars, or write direct to Drewry & Robston, Chattanooga, Tenn., State Agents for Tennessee, Alabama, and Mississippi.

A Lot-down
A lawyer in a county court, says a writer in the Green Bag, having exhausted his eloquence in behalf of his client on trial for slaying, worked up to the climax.
"Gentlemen of the jury, after what this man has offered in evidence and what I have stated to you is the truth, I feel compelled to say that he is guilty."
The jury looked at the money then at the man and then at his lawyer and finally said:
"All right, sir. Which horse do you want?"

Its Worth
The old man who had been wanted to fight the others, saw a man who had been and he was not a bad fellow, but he was not a good fellow either.

Let the Secret Slip
Queen Victoria once gave an important secret away without the slightest intention of doing so. During the Crimean crisis a lady friend of the queen wrote and said that she was desirous of obtaining employment for her boy in the navy. She was afraid that others would not permit him to be given a post in the navy. The queen called him to her and told her that she need not worry about the employment of her son for if he was going to the navy and her boy would with it. The mother delighted with the good news requested it to another lady who immediately put it on to a London morning paper.
